Reshaping Global Climate and Energy Security

Whether the new era of green industrialization brings shared prosperity will depend not only on China's actions but also on how the Global South responds

As the world faces fragmented supply chains, trade tensions and climate shocks, China's domestic transformation under its 14th Five-Year Plan (2021-25) offers both stability and prosperity. Beyond geopolitics, China's achievements in renewable energy and electric mobility carry deep implications for the prosperity and resilience of the Global South.
